

ALISE is the home for...

making new friends

connecting with colleagues

and recognizing excellence

...in library education.

What do our members say about ALISE?

"ALISE has been a great aide to my professional and academic success. Participation in SIGs and panels has helped me to develop skills vital for long-term success in the broader LIS community."

–Ajit Pyati

"ALISE serves a vital role in the library and information science world. Not only does it serve as a meeting place for the invisible college and the primary stop for all search committees, it draws invaluable attention to issues of teaching and curriculum in the field."

– R. David Lankes

"ALISE has provided me the opportunity to present juried papers and discuss current research issues, to network with colleagues and enjoy lasting friendships, and to learn new ideas and techniques for teaching and curriculum development."

–Marie Radford

"ALISE is the one organization that focuses not only on what we teach in LIS but on how we teach. I look forward to ALISE conferences to expand my understanding of the field and to stimulate my thinking about LIS education."

–Jean L. Preer

ASSOCIATION FOR LIBRARY AND INFORMATION SCIENCE EDUCATION

Who are our members?

All levels of faculty, administration, students, librarians, researchers, educational institutions, and others interested in library and information science education.

“During my 30-year career as an LIS educator, I have found that ALISE contributed to my professional development at every stage, from doctoral student to senior faculty member and administrator. I have learned much from my colleagues at other schools and had opportunities to contribute to the advancement of LIS education through my involvement in ALISE.”

–Linda C. Smith
