

Call for Juried Panels

Deadline: March 15, 2022

Notification of acceptance: May 15, 2022

Submissions are invited for Juried Panels for the 2022 ALISE Annual Conference, “Go back and Get It: From One Narrative to Many”. This conference welcomes contributions that address the ways that LIS educators and professionals are re-engineering our standard procedures, practices, policies, pedagogies, communication, and general approaches to our work and other areas of impact in order to become viable in our rapidly changing environments. Plans, actions, strategies, innovations, research and research methodologies and pedagogies are needed for enabling LIS educators and graduates to examine and bolster the foundations upon which our education and institutions are built and address marginalization and social justice.

Panels should explore how LIS educators and professionals are addressing these questions: How can the voices of marginalized people be heard? How can systemic discrimination be addressed in LIS education? How can we study and learn from the complex history of our own profession and institutions? How can cultural humility be infused into the library and information sciences professions? Which cultural metaphors can guide our efforts to prepare future generations of librarians to take part in this evolving LIS landscape? How can marginalized voices be incorporated into the narrative of LIS education? Which questions should be asked to enable us to respond to difficult questions? How are we as educators perpetuating systems of injustice? How might LIS education move beyond performative “diversity” efforts toward measurable, significant, lasting change? How do we continually re-adjust our programs to prepare our students to fearlessly challenge injustice?

A panel must have a clear focus explicitly related to the conference theme and must be designed to foster interaction between panelists and audience members. Innovative panel formats and panels leading to future action and research are encouraged. Panel presentations will be scheduled in 90-minute blocks.
